AURALEX ACOUSTICS' AUDIOTILE™ USED IN EPISODE OF ABC'S *EXTREME MAKEOVER: HOME EDITION

SEATTLE, WA, January 16, 2006—Every Sunday, millions of viewers watch as ABC's Extreme Makeover: Home Edition, undertakes the monumental task of completely rebuilding a home in a one-week timeframe. When a recent renovation called for specialized acoustical treatments, Auralex recommended its new AudioTile and assisted the crew during the installation of the product in a vocal recording booth.

"One of their design team members was familiar with one of our products commonly used in professional recording studios," says Tracy Chandler, director of sales and marketing for Auralex. "After a quick introduction to AudioTile, the designer knew it had the kind of eye-catching, high-end appeal they were looking for.

"The AudioTile product that we feature on the show is part of our new pArtScience™ product line that blends art and science together," continues Chandler. "AudioTile absorbs echoes and other unwanted sound reflections, which is key to producing high-quality, accurate sound. AudioTile is a designer's dream as well, because it is available in the widest variety of custom patterns on the market."

Auralex's Brian Wheat spent two days in Seattle working on the project for Extreme Makeover: Home Edition.

"To be involved with a show like Extreme Makeover: Home Edition is a great opportunity for a company like ours to strengthen our visibility with the general public," Wheat said. "It was an unforgettable experience just to be a part of such an enormous undertaking and such an incredibly generous gesture for a deserving family."
